be top-heavy favorites. Moreover, Wilfred Reid, another English player, tied for second place in to-day's round.

Better golf was in order to-day than was seen yesterday, and Ray, with each of his two rounds made in 74, made the low mark of the day, 148, three strokes lower than the figure at which Vardon led the field yesterday. Reid and R. G. Macdonald, who tied for second, each made a 72 in the morning, a new low mark for an eighteenhole round, but neither could do better than 79 in the afternoon.

Ray began his morning round by getting in the rough and losing a stroke on the first hole. Then he steadied down and played splendid golf for the remainder of the round, with the exception of four missed puts, three of them pretty short ones. He was out in 38 and came home in 36. His drive foot put for a 3. The next minute his rartner, Jack Hobens, of Englewood, holed his twenty-fiva-foot put for a 3, to the great delight of the big gallery that was assembled around the green.
